

Iron Valley

Isabelle

Queen of Montour (103-111). She succeeded her husband Raymond I due to the very young age of their son Baldwin II.

Isles, the

Located east of Shalgreth, in the Sea of Unease. These Isles were the home of independent Dornite clans who made a living from fishing, farming and piracy, before Castrovia invaded, annexed and colonised them. Long a part of the Empire, the Isles were basically abandoned after the Gel inroads into the Empire in the last century. The Lords of the Isles became increasingly aligned with Montour, but a new wave of Dornite migrants hit the Isles about sixty years ago and began occupying them. Despite Montese aid, the last of the Lords was forced into exile 30 years later. The Dornites have set up a number of dominions in the Isles, and once again live by fishing, farming and piracy. Thankfully for Montour and the other coastal kingdoms the Dornites are more likely to raid each other than the continent.

The largest settlement of the Isles, and the seat of the strongest Dornite chief, is Atreius.

Isok Kul

An orc king ruling the Upper Valley of the Breaking River. From 352 Isok Kul has slowly been extending his sway ever further south. The ruins of Veyrines were taken in 352, and open conflict between his forces and those of Breakingdale erupted in the autumn of 358, where Cottlestone was taken and orc forces briefly threatened Fromont and Krothering itself before withdrawing back into the hills and forests.

From:

<https://www.curufea.com/> - Curufea's Homepage

Permanent link:

<https://www.curufea.com/doku.php?id=roleplaying:campaign:montour:cyclopediai>

Last update: 2013/03/18 19:55

